WHAT'S HAPPENING IN TUSCALOOSA ON NEW YEAR'S EVE

Shelton's roving reporter continues her search of activities planned to celebrate the arrival of the year 2000 on December 31, 1999.

We have found the following events planned in Tuscaloosa New Year's Eve.

The Four Points Hotel has definitely planned the biggest bash of the season. They will decorate each room of their Millennium party in a different decade. A band, two disc jockeys, gifts, a balloon drop, and other special activities are planned. The price for the package is $99.00 a couple. Other prices include dinner, and a special option includes a hotel room and breakfast the following morning.

Most of the area's private clubs will be open. A dinner and dance is planned at Indian Hills Country Club. A Touch of Gray is playing, and tickets are $60 a couple for club members.

North River Yacht Club is also planning a big bash for their members that includes a hot shot dance with a band, a swing band, food and of course, champagne.

Tuscaloosa Country Club will be open for dinner but they do not plan a special party. The University Club will be closed.

Tuscaloosa Park and Recreation Center is planning a big Millennium celebration at the McAbee Center located next to the V.A. Hospital. Tickets are $25 a couple and $13 single if purchased before December 10. For additional information, call the PARA office, 562-3235.

Arman's, Mezzanine, and the Globe restaurants will be open for dinner that evening, but no special parties are planned. Evangeline's and Hale's Tavern are planning special events for the evening. Several of Tuscaloosa's new downtown bars will be open although they had not completed their party plans.

First Methodist Church, First Presbyterian Church, and Covenant Presbyterian Church are planning a special musical celebration leading up to the new Millennium. First Baptist Church is planning a party for the youth ministry. Holy Spirit Catholic Church is planning a dance and New Year Eve party in the parish hall.
